About Kate

Kate LaSala is a multi-credentialed behavior consultant who specializes in fear, aggression, and separation anxiety and owns Rescued By Training. She's an expert in fearful dogs and has a passion for rescues and seniors. She is also a companion animal death doula and helps clients navigate pet loss and grief, especially stigmatized losses like behavioral euthanasia. In April 2024 she said goodbye her heart dog BooBoo, who was her muse and inspiration to become a trainer and has been documenting her own grief journey.

After over a decade of training fearful dogs, Kate has helped thousands of dogs overcome issues their guardians thought were impossible, helping clients worldwide through remote one-on-one sessions and through her self-paced courses.

A lifelong animal advocate, she helped shutter puppy mill stores around the NYC area while supporting industry legislation efforts, advocating against punitive training methods while supporting standards of education, competency, continuing education and transparency in the dog training industry so there are humane standards of training for the animals and consumer protection for the humans. She shares her life with her audio tech, husband John and they are an active dog foster family.
